EXPLANATORY.

Some twelve years ago, I undertook, as a pastime, to gather such information concerning my family ancestry and connections as an amateur in such work, with but few facts in hand as the basis of inquiry, might conveniently obtain. The facility, however, with which the ancestral line and collateral branches were unfolded by the records examined, led to an extension of the inquiry, and many names and items of interest pertaining to various branches of the Fosdick family were obtained, and grouped and arranged in a general manuscript record of the family at large. Of these names, those contained in the Oyster Bay branch, constitute a little more than one third only. In undertaking now to accede to requests made from time to time to print, it was obvious that to include all the branches would materially increase the time and labor required for the work; and indeed, would be well nigh impracticable on my part, as it would call for an effort toward completeness as to all the branches which would involve extended research and visitation to localities, requiring more time and attention than are compatible with the daily demands of business life. This consideration and the circumstance that the limitation to a single branch would allow of particular reference to some incidents and data, which, while of interest to its members, might not be deemed of sufficient import to be inserted in a general record, induced me to confine the following pages to the branch which was the primary subject of inquiry.

I selected Oyster Bay as the distinctive term to designate this branch, because that is the place where its founder, Samuel Fosdick 3d, resided during the greater part of his life, and was the birthplace of all his children. In my investigation of this branch its records were found to be scattered and fragmentary, and although, by the aid of its representatives, they have been obtained to the extent indicated by the following record, yet the record is necessarily far from complete, and it is submitted to the representatives of this branch (for whom exclusively it is printed) with the request that they will freely suggest to me such corrections and additions as they shall find it to need.

It is owing to the interest and liberality of Hon. Morris Fosdick, father of the compiler, who bears the expense of passing these pages through the press, that the work is thus put in permanent form for preservation and distribution.

*THE ORIGIN, EMIGRATION AND

ORIGIN.

The first known ancestor, bearing the family name, was Stephen Fosdick, who, with his wife and eight children, settled at Charlestown, on Massachusetts Bay, in 1635. Nothing positive is known of them prior to this; no inquiry has been prosecuted abroad to obtain earlier facts; but there is no reason to doubt that they came from England, and all the indications point to a long succession of English ancestors. Savage, in his Genealogical Dictionary (Art. Fosdick) alludes to the English origin¹; Lower, in his Patronymica Britannica, gives the family name (in forms Fosdick, Forsdike) as an English surname²; there is a parish of the name (form Fosdyke) in Lincolnshire³; and the name of "Johne de Focedic" appears in the list for Lincoln County in the Hundred Rolls of Edward I.⁴ (A. D. 1273). This theory conforms substantially to the traditions held by some of the American branches of the family.⁵ And the fact that the arrival in this country embraced an entire household, and the circumstances of their life after their arrival, tend to show that they had a permanent family establishment at home, and that they were a branch of an old, though perhaps not conspicuous family there.

Note.—The concurrence of the various family traditions in ascribing the family origin to Great Britain is noteworthy, because of the widely separated localities, and the entirely distinct branches of the family from which they have come. Scotland, Wales and England are all named as the immediate country of its location, but the most direct statements, founded upon the result of some inquiry, point to England. The family name, Fosdyk, is said to be common in Wales, and the Fosdecks in Coblenz, Germany, but a quaint and comparatively clear statement in 1865, comes from Erie Co., N. Y., as follows :

“Tradition says that their ancestors came with William, the Norman, from Normandy, in France, as soldiers in his army nearly 800 years ago, and helped place that Prince upon the British Throne. And still further that they were of German descent, but I have not been able to get anything reliable beyond their settlement in this country. The pages of history do not mention them, (I am happy to say) and nothing short of years of labor and great expense can trace the genealogy.”

Unfortunately the writer (Morris Fosdick, of Erie Co.) does not state the derivation of the tradition, and his death in 1872, precludes the possibility of learning the facts he may have collected regarding it.

THE EMIGRATION.

The precise date of the emigration of the family to this country is not known. No record has been found of the port of departure, the vessel in which they came, or the place or date of their arrival. The omission is not material, since, in and just previous to the year of their settlement in Charlestown, the tide of emigration set strongly from England to America, twenty-one ships having arrived in 1634, at Massachusetts Bay, bringing "a great store of passengers and cattle,"¹ and large numbers of lists of the passengers were not preserved, or have not yet been found, and this, even in the cases of some of the most conspicuous and worthy families in the colonies. The sweeping terms employed by Hotten in his reference to these missing lists also show that the omission is not to be taken in disparagement of either the character or position of the families to which it applies. He says, "we learn incidentally that ships left England almost daily for America, but no records of them or of their passengers remain. We know that many ships sailed from Bristol, among others, "The Angel Gabriel" and "The James," conveying the Rev. Richard Mather and the Rev. Daniel Mande, but no records of departures from that port remain. Again, who were the companions, who sailed in 1633, in "The Griffin," with John Haynes and the Rev. Thomas Hooker? Where are the lists of "The Arabella" and other ships in which John Winthrop and the founders of Massachusetts embarked? Who went out with the Rev. Ezekiel Rogers from Rowley, and with Fenwick and the Rev. Henry Whitfield? These are but a few instances to show how very imperfect are our records of the early settlers.”¹

A sufficient reason for the emigration of the family is readily suggested by any one of the many causes of disquiet and agitation prevalent among the people of Great Britain at the time. From the traits and characteristics exhibited by the family after their arrival, it seems safe to say that they came either for financial betterment or the gratification of religious predilections, or both. The religious disquiet at home, their residence in the vicinity of the place from which the Pilgrims had taken their departure,² their consequent interest in the new Pilgrim colony, and the glowing accounts received from it, would all contribute to make them eager to seek it as a haven where undisturbed labor and worship might be enjoyed. For this purpose they would naturally emigrate direct to the shores of Massachusetts Bay. Besides, the youthfulness of some of the children, and the probable incumbrance of some supply of household goods, are additional reasons for supposing that the settlement in Charlestown took place immediately upon their arrival in the country.

THE SETTLEMENT.

The family, on arriving at Charlestown, consisted of Stephen Fosdick, aged 52; his wife, Sarah, aged 46; and his children: Hannah, aged 20; Thomas, 18; Martha, 17; Samuel, 16; two unknown; John, 9; and Mary, 5. This Stephen Fosdick was the progenitor of almost all of the family name in this country whose ancestry is known. He took steps at once to secure a permanent home. He applied for and was granted admission as an inhabitant, his name appearing in the list of inhabitants for 1635.¹ This was not a mere matter of course, consequent upon his arrival. The local historian tells us that those only were inhabitants "who were admitted such by vote of the town. For many years applicants were severely scrutinized, and not unfrequently refused a residence. 'Not for their poverty' Johnson writes; correctly of this early period, for it will give a vivid idea of its prejudices to say, that the towns then dreaded a Quaker as much, as later, they dreaded a pauper. 'Yet,' continues Johnson, a zealous actor in municipal affairs, 'such as were exorbitant, and of a turbulent spirit, unfit for civil society, they would reject till they come to mend their manners.' Credentials that applicants were church members, or of good moral character were required."² "As early as 1634, October 13, it was ordered 'that none be permitted to sit down and dwell in this town without the consent of the town first obtained.'"³ As he was not admitted to the church until three years afterwards, it follows that his credentials on this occasion must have been to satisfy the town of his good moral character, independently of church membership.

1. Frothingham's Hist., Charlestown, 84.

2. Ib. 54.

3. Ib. 54.

"Each inhabitant, on being admitted, commonly had a grant of a lot of land. This was done at first, in general town meeting; after a few years by the Board of Selectmen, * * * in 1635, Stephen Fosdick had a house plot upon condition to build a good house upon it, and pay goodman Richeson a days work."¹ The record of this grant made in general town meeting, is the earliest record found relating to the family, and is as follows :

"1635 Vth month, 11th day.

Stephen fosdick was yielded to have ye houseplott next Good Convers, his new

Stephen fosdick house upon condition to build A good house upon it, and to pay good Richeson A daies worke." ²

This houseplot was probably in a prominent part of the settlement, for Converse and Richeson were both members of the Board of Selectmen.³

The settlement of the family, thus effected without delay, proved to be permanent. In view of the precautions and restrictions prescribed by the town regulations, the promptness with which it was effected indicates that the family was regarded at once as eligible and of satisfactory antecedents and character.

Charlestown, in January, 1635, numbered 72 inhabitants, most of whom had wives and children.⁴ The church had been formed in 1632, from the church in Boston,⁵ but there was no school established until 1636.⁶ The government and social regulations were Puritan.

STEPHEN FOSDICK (PROGENITOR) AND HIS FAMILY.

STEPHEN FOSDICK (PROGENITOR).

STEPHEN FOSDICK (Progenitor) was born in 1583, probably in Lincoln County, England. He married twice; his first wife (name unknown), about 1610, who was the mother of his first six children, and who died in England; and his second wife, Sarai Wetherell, in 1624¹, who was the mother of his two youngest children, John and Mary. His second wife was a sister of John Wetherell, but her parentage is unknown. She may have been related to William Wetherell, schoolmaster, who came to Charlestown in 1635, from Maidstone, Kent County, England, and who was for several years the grammar master of the public school².

He was a carpenter, and doubtless built his house immediately upon receiving the town grant of his house plot, in 1635³. He spent the remainder of his life in Charlestown.

While he does not seem to have occupied any prominent position in the colony, the incidents relating to him, which the records furnish, are not devoid of interest, and serve to show that he was a man of intelligence and thrift, and of no little positiveness of character.

He was admitted a member of the Church in Charlestown, in full communion, on the 6th of 2d mo., 1638, and his wife, Sarah, on the 7th of 7th mo., 1638⁴.

2. Frothingham's Hist., 85.

3. Vide supra, p. 20.

4. Church Records—Budington's Hist. 1st Ch. Charlestown, 247.

Although admitted an inhabitant, owning a house plot, and admitted to the church, he had no voice in colony affairs, or the selection of rulers. He was, as yet, a non-freeman; (the inhabitants being for nearly half a century divided into freemen and non-freemen). To become a freeman, he must, in addition, subscribe the freeman's oath, binding him to maintain the government of the Commonwealth, and must be admitted by order of the General Court. He would then be qualified to vote and be voted for¹. He was admitted a freeman on September 7, 1638, the record of his admission being as follows :

"Persons made free the 7th day of 7th mo., 1638, * * * Steven Forsditch * * * ."2 and
"Sep. 7, 1638. * * * Steven fforditch * * * C. R. Vol. 1, p. 196."3

On the 3d of 10th mo. 1639, he served upon a jury for the trial of an indictment for murder in the Court of Assistants or Quarter Court, held at Boston,⁴ being recorded as "Steven Fosditch."

At a general meeting of the freemen, held the 15th of 12th mo., 1640, he and two others were chosen "Surveyors for y^e Highwaies,"⁵ the only civil office which he is known to have held. (Recorded "Stephen ffordich)."

His church relations do not seem to have been harmonious. In the earlier days of the noted Baptist controversy, he was fined £20, (probably for reading Anabaptist books, or offences of this nature),⁶ and on May 7, 1643, was excommunicated from the church. The civil penalty was released a few years afterwards. His house, worth £15, was burned while it was in the Sheriff's hands, and in 1648, on his petition, the fine was abated to £5, which he paid, and his lands were discharged.¹ But he was not restored to the church until 1664,² about three months before his death. There is no concurrent church record of the sentence or its cause; but the church record of the restoration shows the offence to have consisted in speaking against the church covenant, and neglecting to hear the church in their dealings with him;³ and no reason appears for making this case an exception to the statement made by the historian of the Church, in referring to later cases of discipline, that "it is due to the moral character of the persons thus excommunicated from this church, to say, that it was undoubtedly fair and Christian."⁴

His landed possessions and transactions were considerable. Besides his house plot, granted in 1635; in 1638 the town granted him the meadow between his planting ground and the River;⁵ in 1639, he and four neighbors were granted liberty to make a key, (quay) "as farre out as they will;"⁶ in 1642, he hired "two thirds of the ware vizt Mr. Winthrop's pt. and the Town's pt. the said Stephen is to have halfe the ffish for his Labor and the othr halfe to redound to the use of Mr. Winthrop and the Towne;"⁷ in 1658, March 1, he shared in the allotment of a large tract of town lands among the inhabitants of the town, his share being twenty-five acres wood and four and a half commons;¹ and besides these, made purchases and sales of other tracts to quite a great extent.

He died in Charlestown, May 21, 1664,² aged 81, leaving an estate inventoried at £500,³ which then was riches.⁴ By his will, dated February 23, 1663, probate June 21, 1664, he gave the house and barn and the yard and garden belonging to it, within Charlestown, lying by Mr. Shapley's, with other lands, to his grand child, Samuel Fosdick, the son of John, and to his heirs, male or female, and so to run in the generation of the Fosdicks forever.⁵

The location of the house in Charlestown cannot now be found.⁶

CHARLESTOWN.

JOHN FOSDICK.

JOHN FOSDICK, seventh child of Stephen, born in England, in 1626, was a carpenter, living at Charlestown, except that he is supposed to have lived at Malden a few years. He was probably Sergeant Fosdick of Malden.¹ In 1658 he took a share of the public lands then divided by the town, his share being fourteen acres wood and two and one-half acres commons.² His father Stephen and father-in-law Nicholas Shapley also took shares. In 1675 he and Nathaniel Frothingham took a contract, by vote of the town, to rebuild the galleries, &c., in the church, for which they were to receive £46 in town pay, "and if it shall appear a hard bargain, twenty shillings more."³ He was appointed one of the Tythingmen in 1677,⁴ whose duty it was to inspect each a district of ten or twelve families, and held the office in 1679,⁵ in which year he is also mentioned as owning land adjoining the battery, which was one of the two fortifications in Charlestown.⁶ He was admitted a member of the church in Charlestown in full communion on the 11th of 8th mo., 1696, being recorded as "John Fosdike, sen'r."⁷ He purchased several parcels of land in Malden and Charlestown (other than those allotted to him by the town in 1658), the principal part of which he gave to his sons by deed of gift before his death. He died

He was twice married ; to his first wife, Anna Shapley (daughter of Nicholas and Anna Shapley), in 1648,¹ who died October 15, 1679 ; and to his second wife, Elizabeth Betts (widow of John Betts), who survived him ten days.

His children were eleven in number, named James, Mary, Ann, SAMUEL, John, Stephen, Thomas, Joseph, Sarah, Jonathan and Sarah.²

*SAMUEL FOSDICK FIRST,
(THIRD LINEAL ANCESTOR), ALSO KNOWN AS
CAPTAIN SAMUEL FOSDICK OF NEW LONDON, AND HIS FAMILY.*

NEW LONDON.

SAMUEL FOSDICK FIRST.

SAMUEL FOSDICK, first, the third lineal ancestor, known as Captain Samuel Fosdick of New London, was born in Charlestown December 15, 1655, and went to New London about 1680, where he lived during the rest of his life. He married Mercy Picket at New London November 1, 1682.¹ His wife was the youngest daughter of John Picket and his wife Ruth, whose maiden name was Brewster. Ruth Picket's father, Benjamin Brewster, was son of Jonathan Brewster (a son of Elder William Brewster, of the Mayflower,) whose wife Lucretia, is referred to in Caulkins' History of New London, as follows: "Mrs. Lucretia Brewster, the wife of Jonathan, was evidently a woman of note and respectability among her compeers. She has always the prefix of honor (Mrs. or Mistress) and is usually presented to view in some useful capacity—an attendant upon the sick and dying as nurse, doctress, or midwife, or a witness to wills and other important transactions. She was one of the first band of pilgrims that arrived at Plymouth in the Mayflower, December, 1620, being a member of the family of her father-in-law, Elder William Brewster, and having one child, William, with her. Her husband came over in the Fortune, which arrived November 10th, 1621."² Her name does not appear in Bradford's list of the Mayflower's passengers, but she and her son William were no doubt in the colony when the Fortune arrived, bringing her husband; and with reference to this event, Steele, the historian of the Chief of the Pilgrims, says: "To the colony, weakened in numbers and strength, and surrounded by dangers, it" (the arrival of the Fortune) "was an event marked, and of deep concern. It was so in particular to the family of the Elder. To him and Mrs. Brewster came, among the passengers, their eldest son Jonathan, and to the others an elder brother. Of the Elder's family, therefore, now present, were himself, his wife, and their three sons. From their daughters, they were still separated. How soon, or when, Lucretia, the wife of Jonathan, came with her son William, there appears to be no record."¹ It is not a material matter, but this statement of Steele's seems inferentially to corroborate that of Miss Caulkins, taken from the manuscripts of the family. His wife survived him, and married, for her second husband, John Arnold.

Prior to his removal from Charlestown he served in King Philip's war, 1675, being a corporal in Capt. Samuel Mosely's Company.² He was baptised in Charlestown Church April 15, 1677.³ On or shortly after arriving in New London, and previous to his marriage, he purchased 200 acres from Owenca, Sachem of the Mohegs, the deed for which, January, 1682, describes him as "Samuell fforsdicke late of Charels-towne in the Collonie of y^e Masachusets."⁴

On January 17, 1691-2, he and his wife Mercy owned the covenant, and had four children baptised, viz: Samuel, Mercy, Ruth and Anna, in the First Church of Christ, New London, by Rev. Gurdon Saltonstall, and on February 28, 1696-7, he and his wife were admitted into the church.⁵

He was a Deputy for New London, in the General Court of Connecticut for the years 1694, 1696, 1697, 1698 and 1700.¹ In 1698, he was appointed by the town a member of the first Bartlet Committee, which was a committee to look after an estate which Bartlet had bequeathed to the town.² In the same year, the General Court, on motion of Gov. Fitz John Winthrop, appointed him one of the alternates of a committee to renew the bounds of a tract of land purchased by John Winthrop, former Governor; and at the same time, one of a committee to lay out a township, "beginning at the north bound of Twentie Mile River, and so to extend southward, to a river called Deep River, and to extend eastward from the bounds of Haddum, seven miles."³

In May, 1699, the General Court ordered that a patent be granted of the township of New London, to certain patentees, "Mr. Sam^l Fosdick" being named as one.⁴

He owned a farm on Plum Island, under cultivation, well stocked and productive; a town residence on Fosdick's Neck; a house lot on the bank, comprising nearly the whole block between Golden and Tilley Streets, which lay vacant at his death, but afterwards became the valuable homestead of his youngest son, Thomas, and his decendants.⁵

In addition to his prominence as a landholder and civil officer, he had some distinction in military matters, from which he probably derived his title of Captain. In October 1690, he was appointed a Lieutenant of one of the two foot companies which the General

In August, 1697, at a meeting of the Governor and council in Hartford "Captⁿ Sam^l Fosdick" being one of the members of Council present), orders were sent to Major James Fitch "to take care that the fort at New London be furnished with men, armes and ammunition, and that all things thereto belonging be in good order for the defence of the town and repulse of the enemy; and also to list a certain number of men in each of the towns adjacent, to be ready to march to New London or to any other place within the Countie of New London, upon any sodain approach of the enemy, with other orders necessary to be attended for the defence and safety of his Majesties subjects in that countie in this time of warre and danger. * * * Mr. Sam^l Fosdick was appointed and commissioned by the Council to be Captain of the souldiers to be listed out of the severall towns for the service before mentioned."¹ His name also appears upon the local records in other connections.

He died August 27, 1700, leaving a large estate.² "A glance at the inventory of Capt. Fosdick will show the ample and comfortable style of housekeeping to which the inhabitants had attained in 1700."³ On the division of the estate, ordered August 31, 1704, the widow takes one-third of the realty for life, and one-third of

THE FOURTH LINEAL ANCESTOR,

*NEW LONDON.
CHARLESTOWN.

SAMUEL FOSDICK, SECOND.

SAMUEL FOSDICK, second, also known as Samuel Fosdick, Senior, of Oyster Bay, the fourth lineal ancestor, was the first of the family name, who lived upon Long Island, and was a connecting link, so to speak, between the Charlestown, New London and Oyster Bay branches of the family, with each of which he became identified by his residence, at different periods of his life, in each of those places.

No extended family records are found concerning him. Reliance must therefore be placed upon the records of those places for his history. By a comparison of the facts they disclose (regard being had also to his disposition to move from place to place, and his habit of travel which seems to have been a prominent trait, especially in later life), we are furnished with a sufficiently connected and satisfactory account of his life.

He was born September 16, 1684, in New London, where he lived until about thirty-five years of age. Here he was baptized January 17, 1691-2, at the First Church of Christ, with his sisters, Mercy, Ruth and Anna, by Rev. Gurdon Saltonstall.¹ Here he married his first wife, Susanna Turner, July 13, 1706. Her parentage is not stated, but she was probably a daughter of Ezekiel Turner, of New London, who came to that place from Scituate, about 1675, married Susanna Keeny, in 1678, and died in New London, January 16, 1703-4, leaving a son and ten daughters. If so, she also, as well as the wife of Samuel Fosdick 1st, was descended from the Brewsters; her father's mother, Mary, being a daughter of Jonathan and Lucretia Brewster, before referred to. Here his first six children, Mercy, Mary, Samuel, William, Ruth and James were born, and James, the youngest, was baptized here on June 2, 1717.¹

He now removed, with his wife and six children, to Charlestown, where he owned the house and property inherited as heir of his father, under the will of his great grandfather, Stephen Fosdick², and perhaps this property became the family residence. His three younger children, Ezekiel, Jesse and Susanna, were born in Charlestown, the eldest of them on February 17, 1719-20, and the youngest on October 11, 1724. Here he had some unimportant transactions in landed property, and on September 19, 1728, he gave and granted to the selectmen, for the time being, of Charlestown, all his "housing and lands in said Charlestown and Stoneham," excepting certain parcels; and providing as to these excepted parcels that if he should sell them "or any part thereof, for the payment of his debts or other ways," his wife should sign the deeds with him, and should have half the money remaining after payment of his debts. "To have and to hold unto the said selectmen during the life of my said wife provided she sign and execute deeds as above said unless I return and live with her again until death part us to the use and intent that the said selectmen as above said shall suffer the said Susannah always to enjoy the premises, and take the whole profit thereof for the maintainance of her own person and children as above said, and that she shall have for herself and use as aforesaid, the one-half of my household goods."³

Having thus made provision for his family during the lifetime of his wife, he went soon after to Oyster Bay.¹ Only his son Samuel accompanied him. The rest of his family remained in Charlestown. He is first mentioned in the records of Oyster Bay, in 1736. His movements during the interval are not shown. He may have tarried a little in Charlestown, probably visited New London, and possibly made a voyage to England and back. He was a blacksmith, and is once mentioned as a potter. His trade of blacksmith may give some color of reason for selecting Oyster Bay as a place where he could find lucrative employment. It appears from a recent history of that town that many years previously "no blacksmith was found fit to mend their utensils and wares. They no doubt required an accomplished artisan, one who could make their old articles as good as new, and thus greatly extend their term of usefulness. * * * 'The records show that for many years the settlement of a blacksmith in the village was considered a public concern.'"²

The records of Oyster Bay show:³

1736, April 3. Hezekiah Holdridge, blacksmith, conveyed to Samuel Fosdick, of Oyster Bay, potter, for £50, good and lawful money, or bills of credit of the Colony of Connecticut, in New England, a garden spot and house in Oyster Bay, fifty feet on the street. This is understood to be the location of his smith shop.

1741, February 12. Samuel Fosdick, of Oyster Bay, blacksmith, conveyed to William Hawxhurst, merchant, for seventeen shillings, a small piece of land on which Hawxhurst's foundation stands.

1742, April 6. At a Town Meeting then held "itt was Granted to Samuell ffordick the Liberty of Six Rods of Beach against Blemen's Bridge so called for to Build a Wharfe."

1748, April 29, Charles Wright conveyed land to Samuell Fosdick, of Oysterbay for £30 New York money.

1750, May 9. The same conveyed land to Samuell Fosdick, of the Town of Oyster Bay, for £132 New York money.

1752, March 20. Penn Townsend conveyed to Samuell Fosdick, blacksmith, of Oyster Bay, for £25, New York money, a quarter of an acre "adjoining said Samuel Fosdick's smith shop."

1752, December 7. Samuell Fosdick, blacksmith, and Ezekiel Shadbolt, house carpenter, both of Oyster Bay, gave to their son and daughter, Samuel Fosdick, Jr. and his wife Deborah Fosdick, both of the same town, land in Oyster Bay, which Morris Shadbolt died seised of. This deed is more fully referred to in the account of Samuel Fosdick, Jr., below.

1753, May 17. Samuell Fosdick, of the Town of Oyster Bay, blacksmith, conveyed land to Elije Wright.

1754, September 6. Samuel Fosdick, of Oyster Bay, blacksmith, conveyed land to Isaac Frost.

1754, September 15. Samuel Fosdick, of Oyster Bay, blacksmith, conveyed to John Butler and others, land in Oyster Bay, bounded east and north partly by Samuel Fosdick, Jr.,¹ and, 1756, September 12. Samuel Fosdick, of Oyster Bay, blacksmith, conveyed to Benjamin Hawxhurst, for £127, 10s., the original house spot, blacksmith shop, &c., bought of Holdridge, and the one-quarter acre bought of Townsend.

1. Queens Co. Records.

During the twenty years covered by these transactions, he probably visited Charlestown more or less frequently, and is mentioned as being there in 1751, and as being some months in Boston.¹

His wife Susannah died in Charlestown on February 22, 1753, in her 68th year. Five years afterward he married his second wife, Elizabeth Le Gross of Oyster Bay. The marriage was by banns, at Oyster Bay, by Rev. Samuel Seabury, Rector of St. George's Church, of Hempstead,² in whose parish Oyster Bay was then included. No further mention of her is found. He is mentioned as being in Charlestown again in 1759.³ No further trace of his movements is found until 1767, when he is in Charlestown again. Deborah, wife of his son Samuel, had died in Oyster Bay, July, 1759.⁴ It may be inferred that this second wife of Samuel, Sen., died shortly after her marriage, and that he then went to Charlestown, being afterward in Oyster Bay only at intervals, if at all. As his son Samuel had accompanied him to Oyster Bay, was also a blacksmith, and had doubtless for all these years worked with him in his calling, and been allied with him in his Oyster Bay interests, he probably left his property and business in Oyster Bay to his son's care, and for his benefit.

Later facts show this to have been his intention. By his will, made a few years later, he effectually separates his interests in Oyster Bay from his interests in Charlestown, and allows them to go to Samuel by giving his Charlestown property to his children there, and expressly excluding them from any claim or right to his estate in the government of New York.

His will was made in Charlestown on April 23,

1767, he being then eighty-three years old. The first paragraph is :

“ Memorandum I Samuel Fosdick of Charlestown In the County of Middlesex and Province of the Massachusetts Bay in New England and Being att Present in good helth of Bodey and of Sound Memory and Understanding, and about to take a longue Journey or Voige and being farr advanced In years and age and not Knowing that I shall Ever Return heir again Do make and ordain this my Last will and Testimen as folloeth, viz.”

The will recites that he made a will in 1751 in the lifetime of his wife Susannah, and then gave her the disposal of all his personal or moveable estate after his decease, but she distributed it all “ In the time of my abcenc ” and his daughters still possess it ; he now confirms to them all distributed by his wife before her decease or that which they have taken into possession since her decease, neither of them to claim any part of his estate otherways hereafter ; gives his dutiful son Ezekiel one-half of the lands derived by heirship from Nicholas Shapley “ as shall by my deed of gift manifest ; ” gives his son James the other half thereof, also all his other real estate after his decease, both that which was given him by his great-grandfather Stephen Fosdick by will dated February 23, 1663, and all other lands belonging to him in Charlestown old or Stonham which is not above mentioned, “ and I do hereby Exclud all those my above mentioned children to clame or have aney Right to aney Estate which Doth belonge to me In the Govrment of new York ; ” ordains his son James his heir and executor ; recites that he is the lawful heir of his father Samuel Fosdick who was the same which Stephen Fosdick, late of Charlestown, dec^d, did by his will and entailment give and make over all his land and house in Charlestown, and forbids any alteration or breach of any part of said will of Stephen Fosdick, but that it stand good unto his posterity and especially that part relating to Samuel Fosdick his grandson.

The circumstance that in this will he does not mention his eldest son, Samuel, who was in Oyster Bay, and does not dispose of his property in New York State, and in one of the three instances in which James is named in the will calls him eldest son, is further confirmation of his intention that Samuel should have the property in Oyster Bay solely, and that James's succession should be assured as far as possible to the Charlestown property devised and entailed by the will of Stephen Fosdick.

Nothing whatever is known of him after this time. He probably took the contemplated long voyage or journey and died at sea or abroad. His will was not proved until November 4, 1784¹ (seventeen years after its date and one hundred years after his birth). The Revolutionary War had come and passed. His death was probably presumed from long absence, but the proofs in relation to it are not included in the probate record or files, and its date cannot be even approximately stated.

His children were, 1, Mercy ; 2, Mary ; 3, SAMUEL ; 4, William ; 5, Ruth ; 6, James ; 7, Ezekiel ; 8, Jesse, and 9, Susanna.

*SAMUEL FOSDICK THIRD,
ALSO KNOWN AS SAMUEL FOSDICK
JUNIOR,

SAMUEL FOSDICK THIRD.

SAMUEL FOSDICK third, also known as Samuel Fosdick, junior, of Oyster Bay, the fifth lineal ancestor, was the real founder of the Oyster Bay branch of the family. As he was the last common ancestor of the descendants to whom this record relates, quite full reference to the circumstances of his life and family is thought proper.

He was born in New London, March 11, 1710-11,¹ and was thus about eight years of age when his father's family removed to Charlestown. He probably remained in the latter place until about his twentieth year, when he went with his father to Oyster Bay; but the details of his early life are not positively indicated, and he may have left home much earlier, and may have been located in Oyster Bay before his father went there. He was christened in Oyster Bay, in 1750.² He married and established his family home there, and lived there until after the close of the Revolutionary War. All his twelve children were born in that place.

He was married twice. His first wife, Deborah Shadbolt, whom he married in July, 1752, was a daughter of Ezekiel and Deborah Shadbolt,³ and granddaughter of Morris Shadbolt. Her father and grandfather were both men of some prominence and substance. She was born January 1, 1735.⁴ Her family was Episcopalian, and at a general town meeting, held January 14, 1707, her grandfather was chosen one of the Vestrymen of the Episcopal Church at Hempstead.¹ After their marriage, his father, Samuel Fosdick, blacksmith, and her father, Ezekiel Shadbolt, house carpenter, both of the township of Oyster Bay, joined in giving them a deed, which was dated December 7, 1752, reciting that "for and in consideration of the fatherly love and affection which we have for our son and daughter, Samuella Fosdick, junior, and his wife Deborah Fosdick, both of the same town aforesaid, and for their dutiful and well behaving towards us, and for there further Incouragement of well liveing in the world, wee the said Samuella Fosdick and Ezekiel Shadbolt, do by these presents give, grant, release, convey, assure and confirm unto our aforesaid son, Samuella Fosdick, and to our daughter, Deborah Fosdick his wife, and to their Heirs and assigns forever, all that tract of land, Houses and swamp, which we have, situate, lying and being in the Old Purchase of Oyster Bay, lying on the west side the highway that leads up the east the Mill River Creek so called * * * it being land that was Morriss Shadbolt, deceased, Dyed seised of."²

She died July 3, 1759,³ leaving three small children, Silas, aged 6 years; Morris, 4; and Sarah, 3; of whom Morris died about a year afterward.

His second wife, whom he married in the spring of 1760, was Mary Wright, a widow, whose maiden name was Moore.

She was of Irish descent, her family coming either from Dublin or Ballinasloe, and was a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church. At the time of this marriage she had two small children, by her former husband, named John Wright and Sarah Wright. The former of these went to sea, and was not heard from afterward, and the latter married Zophar Weeks, and lived in New York City, having a son Isaac, who at one time visited her half brothers, Morris and Solomon, when they lived at Rockaway. The Wrights were among the early settlers in Oyster Bay, and had become quite numerous and prominent, the name appearing frequently upon the property records of the town. She died in 1786, at Oyster Bay, and was buried there. She left nine children by her second marriage, named Samuel, Nathaniel, Anna, Prudence, Rebecca, Morris, Thomas, Deborah and Solomon, the latter being but ten years old at the time of her death. She was slight and small of stature (as extravagantly expressed by one descendant "about the size of a wasp)," but spirited, bravehearted, and devoted to her family. Some instances of her courage have been preserved in the family annals, being the reminiscences of Solomon the youngest child, who because of his tender age was more the companion of his mother, from which we insert the following (communicated by one of his granddaughters) by way of illustration :

"Her husband being a blacksmith, had his doors and windows strongly barred. It was not uncommon in those days for people to have their property carried away. A man came to take her poultry. She took an ax, and stepping between him and them, threatened its use if he did not let them alone. He walked first upon one side and then upon the other, she still keeping guard over her flock. Finally he laughed and went away without them."

"While she and her two younger children, Deborah and Solomon, were walking near the shore one day, she saw a man who was swimming suddenly sink, having been seized with cramp. She ran, and plunging into the water, brought him to the shore."

"One evening she and the little children, Debbie and Solomon were alone in the house. There was a knock at the door. She said, 'Samuel is that you?' No answer, but another knock at the door. She repeated the question. Some one said, 'open the door or I'll stave it down.' She went to another door. The famous dog, Gunner, was by her side. She opened the door and told Gunner to take him. She heard some one run. Heard Gunner grapple him, went out and discovered that he had got a negro by the throat. She had to choke the dog before he would let go his hold. The negro was badly hurt. She dragged him into the entry, and in the morning sent for his master."

"One of her granddaughters states that she always heard her grandmother Fosdick mentioned as more than an ordinary woman; had heard her shrewdness spoken of in connection with accounts of her management about sending baskets of provisions and other things to her husband and other continental soldiers; thought they were prisoners or in barracks; had heard it said that she had done a great deal in the time of the war, and had been a great help."

He was a blacksmith, and doubtless followed that calling in the shop of his father, living after his first marriage, on the place conveyed to him and his first wife by their parents. He and his wife Mary conveyed this property in March, 1763, for £250.¹ Some time subsequent to this they lived upon the Norse Wright farm. She and her children may have been possessed of a farm when he married her. In 1767, he sold a slave (a negro woman named Venus), for

£55, stated in the record of the transaction to be the property of his two eldest children, Silas and Sarah, and gave the purchaser a mortgage for obtaining a release from them.¹

In 1775, he took part in an election held for Queens County, at Jamaica, from November 7th to 11th, in that year, for Deputies to the Provincial Congress, which resulted in a vote of 221 for Deputies, and 788 against. His name appears in the list of those who voted against sending Deputies,² and he thus became subject to the resolutions which the Provincial Congress passed December 21, 1775, in retaliation.³ A large number of these "delinquents" afterward retracted and became attached to the colonial cause. About a year later, "the King being now in possession of Queens County, and his soldiers scattered over it, the leading whigs having been thrown into prison, and the property of those who fled seized by the enemy, the remainder were constrained to join the Loyalists in petitioning the King's Commissioners that Queens County might be restored to Royal favor."⁴ This petition, dated October 21, 1776, has 1293 names, "Samuel Fosdick" being one.

He and his son Samuel were in the Continental service, though it is probable that, owing to the British occupation and the existence of martial law, their movements in the vicinity of home were marked with great caution. During this time his wife proved her capability in meeting the troublous circumstances with which her home and little ones were surrounded. Oyster Bay, from its location on the Sound, on the north side of the Island, opposite the Connecticut shore, occupied an exposed position during the Revolutionary period. The occupation of the region by the enemy rendered the times troublous and vexatious to householders. In addition to personal danger, there was constant liability to depredations upon property. Households were not seldom composed of women and children much of the time, and coolness and courage were often necessarily required of the inmates. In the case of this ancestor, his wife seems to have showed sterling qualities during this trying period, such as were in keeping with the times, and as so generally throughout the country, rendered the women of the households during the Revolution memorable for their bravery and devotion. When the war commenced he was wealthy, but it "ruined him as to property—from the British landing on Long Island to the close of the war there was nothing but destruction and desolation."¹ It is stated that a further cause of his shipwrecked fortune was his too great confidence in Continental money, in which money he was paid when he sold his farm.

After the death of his second wife he removed with his younger children to the farm of his son Silas, in Dutchess County, where he remained until his death. It is to be noticed that, by this removal, the family name became extinct on Long Island for several years. He took his remaining effects and property with him to his son Silas's, to whom he gave them, with the understanding that he should be taken care of during his life, and his younger children brought up. It is not known that any relics have been preserved among his descendants, with the two exceptions of his musket, (a Queen's arm) which came into the possession of his youngest son, Solomon, (by whom it was highly prized), and is now in possession of a grandson of the latter, and a calumet or tomahawk, stamped 1769, concerning which the present owner says, that it was left with Samuel Fosdick, of Long Island to be mended, in or about 1770, that the breaking out of the Revolution left it in his hands, whence it passed into the hands of his son Silas, and from him to Solomon, and came into possession of Jesse T. Fosdick, present owner, March 1, 1880. The calumet proper, is of brass, the cutting edge of steel, indented dots on the side are supposed to show the number of scalps taken by its Indian owner, the head forms a pipebowl, and the handle the stem, it no doubt having often passed around a circle of dusky warriors as a peace offering or in smoking conclave.

He died in Dutchess County, on Silas's farm, in 1792, aged 82, suddenly, having worked in the harvest field the day before his death.¹

THE FAMILY LIFE AND HOME IN OYSTER BAY.

There is every indication in the above that the father was industrious and prosperous in his business, happy in his domestic relations, and devoted to his work and his home. His residence in the same place from youth to old age, is in marked contrast with the wanderings of his father, with whom, notwithstanding, he seems to have been a favorite. It is probable that while his father was in Oyster Bay they lived and worked together, and that, after the son's marriage, the father formed part of his household. The family life was auspiciously begun under the encouragement and aid of his father and his wife's father, as has been shown. Its sad interruption seven years later, by the death of his wife, leaving him with three small motherless children, was happily brief; the accession of his second wife with her two small fatherless children, occurring a short time afterward. From this time until the Revolution, the family life seems to have flowed on uneventfully, peacefully and successfully; the father absorbed in his occupation, a quiet, perhaps a reticent man; the mother energetic and careful in her household and maternal duties; the children well brought up; the older ones, at proper ages, leaving home to provide for themselves, and the younger tenderly cared for at home.

Even through the disturbing influences of the Revolution the household was sustained, the youngest children being watched over and cherished by their mother until her death.

A descendant writes of these parents: "They had a numerous family, all of whom were remarkable for activity—never easy—always in motion, with great benevolence and kindness."¹

*CHILDREN OF SAMUEL FOSDICK THIRD,

CHILDREN OF SAMUEL FOSDICK, THIRD.

These were—1, SILAS; 2, MORRIS; 3, SARAH; (by his first wife, Deborah Shadbolt), and 4, SAMUEL; 5, NATHANIEL; 6, ANNA; 7, PRUDENCE; 8, REBECCA; 9, MORRIS; 10, THOMAS; 11, DEBORAH; and 12, SOLOMON, (by his second wife, Mary Wright).

The second child, Morris, born May 4, 1755, died at the age of five years. He was probably named after Morris Shadbolt, grandfather of his mother. He is believed to have been the first of the family to bear the name Morris, which was afterward, however, repeatedly given to later descendants. His half brother, the ninth child, was given the same name.

Deborah, the eleventh child, was born in 1774. She never married, and died a young lady. She was amiable, kindhearted, self sacrificing, and faithful to duty. The circumstances of her life were almost pathetic. Tenderly cared for and delicately reared as a child, left motherless at the age of twelve, her home broken up while still a child, the hardships of the times compelling her employment among comparative strangers, she early succumbed to the tasks she was called upon to meet, though kindly treated and provided for by those with whom she had her home.

Silas settled in Dutchess County; Sarah married William Brown, and lived in the same County; Samuel, in Greene County; Nathaniel, in Orange County; Anna married John Valentine and lived in Queens County; Prudence married Joseph Lawrence and lived in Saratoga County; Rebecca married Richard Hines, and lived in New York City; Morris, in Queens County; Thomas, in Orange County; and Solomon in Erie County; all in New York State.

It was quite usual at this period for families to have an interest in and some acquaintance with sailing vessels, which were a very general and important means of travel and traffic. These were very numerous on such waterways as the Sound and the Hudson, especially the latter, (a fact fully noticed by Cooper in his "Afloat and Ashore" and his "Miles Wallingford.") Hence some liking for seamanship was apt to be developed in the boys and young men of the time, and it was natural that the sons of this ancestor should leave their home early, and be found located, in after years, in different places along or near the Hudson. The removal of the father and younger children to the home of Silas in Dutchess County also, no doubt, contributed to this result. Then, in consequence of the loss of property by the war, they were all thrown upon their own resources at an early age, and this necessity for individual and independent effort caused their permanent settlement in separate and somewhat distant localities; so that, in those days of imperfect communication, intercourse between them was not intimate or frequent, although visits were made between some of them at long intervals. Their records were thus found disconnected, and only the gratifying interest shown by most of the living representatives in learning of each other, and their consequent cordial response to inquiries, has made possible the gathering into one compilation of the records and facts next given.

NOTE. Only three of the grandsons of Samuel Fosdick, third, are known to survive: Morris Fosdick, of Jamaica, N. Y., son of his ninth child Morris, and John S. Fosdick of Westfield, N. Y., and Jesse T. Fosdick, of Salamanca, N. Y., sons of his twelfth child Solomon.

SILAS FOSDICK, the eldest child of Samuel Fosdick, third, became a farmer. He was born in Oyster Bay, April 30, 1753. His mother, Deborah, died when he was six years old. He left Oyster Bay when young, and went eventually to Nine Partners, now Clinton, Dutchess County, N. Y., where he purchased a farm and settled before the Revolutionary war, and remained there until his death. He married Mary Hallock, daughter of Gershom and Mary Hallock, of Clinton, on October 11, 1781. She was born January 30, 1766. It was with him that his father formed his domicile on his removal from Long Island after the death of his second wife, bringing his younger children with him. His father remained with him until his death in 1792. It is not supposed that the children remained there long. His wife died April 3, 1827. He survived her eighteen years, his death occurring on March 19, 1845, on the same farm which he purchased when a young man. He commenced poor, but became wealthy, and left a considerable estate. His will, made September 23, 1843, mentions fifty acres in the Town of Vienna, in possession of his son Gershom, gives his Bible to his son William B., and refers to all his living children and to the heirs of his deceased son Isaac. His homestead is not specifically mentioned.

His children were: 1, ISAAC; 2, GERSHOM; 3, SILAS Jr.; 4, DEBORAH; 5, GEORGE W.; 6, SARAH; 7, MARY; 8, MORRIS; 9, PHEBE, and 10, WILLIAM B.

SARAH FOSDICK, the third child of Samuel Fosdick third, and his last child by his first wife Deborah, was born July 16, 1757, at Oyster Bay. She married William Brown, a farmer, near Pleasant Valley, in Dutchess County, New York, on March 16, 1785. The fact that she was the only own sister of Silas may serve to account for her marriage and location in the vicinity of his home. She probably visited him, and may have made her residence with him for a time before his marriage. She and her husband lived and died on their farm, about three miles southeast of Pleasant Valley. They were zealous members of the Presbyterian Church. Her husband was a Captain in the war of 1812; was wounded by a bullet passing through his neck, and received a pension for a few years before his death.

She died March 30, 1824. Her husband was born September 14, 1755, and died November 8, 1828.

Gen. VI., Samuel Fosdick fourth, fourth ch. of Samuel third.

SAMUEL FOSDICK FOURTH, the fourth child of Samuel Fosdick third, and his first child by his second wife Mary, was born December, 1760, at Oyster Bay. After leaving the Continental army, he removed from Long Island to the west part of the Town of New Baltimore, in Greene County, New York, near Cox-sackie, where he became a farmer, owning a farm and living there until his death. He married Elizabeth Thorne, April 13, 1786. He was of thrifty habit and exemplary character, and they became wealthy. He also became a Quaker preacher, and it was his custom to regularly attend the Yearly Meetings of Friends, in New York City, on which occasions he visited his younger brother, Morris, at Springfield, Long Island. His grandson, Samuel T., remembers that he and his father David accompanied his grandfather on one of these visits, 1827 or 1828, and they all made an excursion to Rockaway. These yearly visits he continued to his brother's children after their parents died, making the last one in 1845, about two years before his death.

In illustration of his own carefulness and the customs of the time, it is said that on being asked, on one of these visits, as to the expense of traveling, he replied: "Morris, I will tell thee; I had six dollars in my pocket when I left Coxsackie, and I expect to have six dollars when I arrive home." His wife died January 12, 1833, aged 63. He died January 18, 1847, aged 86, "at peace with all the world, esteemed by all that knew him, a peacemaker in fact."

His children were: 1, DEBORAH; 2, MARY; 3, HENRY C.; 4, DAVID; 5, NATHANIEL; and 6, EPHRAIM.

NATHANIEL FOSDICK AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

LINE OF ANCESTRY.

Gen. I., Stephen Fosdick, progenitor, 1583-1664.

Gen. II., John Fosdick, seventh ch. of Stephen 1626-1716.

Gen. III., Samuel Fosdick first, fourth ch. of John, 1655-1700.

Gen. VI., Nathaniel Fosdick, fifth ch. of Samuel third.

NATHANIEL FOSDICK, the fifth child of Samuel Fosdick third, of Oyster Bay, was born in 1762, at that place; left home early; went to Nova Scotia; lived there several years; married his wife there; returned to New York with considerable money, and was at one time Keeper of the Old State Prison at Greenwich Village, then a suburb of the City, about a mile and a half north of the present Duane street; on leaving there, settled in Newburgh, Orange County; after some years removed to Western New York with his wife and youngest daughter; was a farmer there, at Ashford; about 1830 returned to Newburgh, where he died in 1835 or 1836, from paralysis, caused by an injury to his hand. He was engaged in the war, though very young, for it is stated that on one occasion when he tried to escape to see his mother, he hid himself in an old building, and when they attempted to take him prisoner he killed a Hessian soldier. It is also said that when he was about to sail for St. John's, his mother went aboard the vessel, and tried to persuade him not to go; but he persisted, and it was a matter of regret to him during life, for he never saw her again. During his stay in Western New York he met with his brother Solomon and family. His farming venture there was unsuccessful. He frankly stated that he could make more from his garden in Newburgh than from his whole farm in Ashford.

His wife was Rachel Moral, of Nova Scotia, whom he married in 1788. She was noted for extraordinary physical strength. She survived him, dying in 1862, aet. 88, at the residence of her son-in-law, at Clyde, Ohio.

ANNA FOSDICK, the sixth child of Samuel Fosdick third, was born in 1764, at Oyster Bay ; married John Valentine, of Flushing, in Queens County, and lived at Little Neck in that Town ; was a Quakeress. She was the only one of the children who did not leave Long Island, and for that reason probably did not have much intercourse with her brothers and and sisters. Her niece, Angeline, daughter of Solomon, however recollected going with her little cousin Fanny, daughter of Morris, with their parents, when they lived at Rockaway, to visit her aunt Anna Valentine, at Little Neck. It was on Sunday, and they met her on her way to meeting. Her aunt gave her a token on the occasion which is still preserved by her daughter as a memento.

For some time before her death she resided with her youngest daughter in Flushing Village. She died there on September 16, 1827.

Gen. VI., Rebecca Fosdick, eighth ch. of Samuel third.

REBECCA FOSDICK, the eighth child of Samuel Fosdick third, of Oyster Bay, was born in 1768, at that place. She married Richard Hines, and they lived in New York City, and both died there on the same day, but in what year is not known. She was an affectionate sister, and a favorite with her brother Solomon, who considered that he owed his life to her care on one occasion before his marriage when he was dangerously ill with fever without hope of recovery, and left very much to himself. His sister, hearing of it, left her place of employment to nurse him. On seeing his condition she wept bitterly, and devotedly cared for him, with the result of his recovery, although the attending physician had pronounced it hopeless. After her marriage, while she was living in New York, her brother Morris, it is believed, visited her occasionally, generally bringing presents from her to his own and Solomon's girls on his return.

She left three young children: 1, RICHARD; 2, CATHARINE; and 3, ANNA.

Of 2, CATHARINE, and 3, ANNA, nothing is known.

MORRIS FOSDICK AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

Gen. VI., Morris Fosdick, ninth ch. of Samuel third.

MORRIS FOSDICK, the ninth child of Samuel Fosdick third, of Oyster Bay, was born at that place on November 21, 1770.

When ten years of age, in carrying an ax for trimming apple trees, having it upon his arm with the handle below, he fell, with the edge upon his wrist and his body upon the head, and severed his left hand at the wrist. He was attended by surgeons from the army, who, to guard against surprise, or for some other reason, were in the habit of placing their swords upon the bed where he lay, while they dressed the wrist. As incidents of their visits, it is said that they were highly displeased on one occasion when a gun was fired near the house, causing the patient to start suddenly while they were engaged with him; and that, whenever they came, the patient's little sister Debbie, and brother Solomon would run away and hide themselves through fear. This loss of his hand has been alluded to by several distant correspondents in the course of this inquiry, serving in some instances to confirm identity and relationship. Owing to this misfortune, special pains were taken with his education.

He was sixteen years old when the removal to Dutchess County took place. At the age of eighteen he commenced teaching, his first school being at Hamburg, on the Hudson, where he remained six months. He then returned to his native place, Oyster Bay, and taught there until 1792, when he went to Rockaway and taught there, near a place now called Hewletts. He remained at Rockaway sixteen years; was married while living there. His brother Solomon also lived there at this time, and the two families were very intimate. In the spring of 1808, he traveled to Buffalo to see the country, with the view of settling in Western New York. He made the journey on foot, notwithstanding which his traveling companion, so to speak, was a gentleman on horseback, for although they separated during the day, they generally reached the same lodging places at night. On his return to Rockaway, his report of the Western region was so favorable that both he and his brother Solomon concluded to remove there with their families; but he was induced to engage as teacher at Springfield, and Solomon went without him. He removed from Rockaway to Springfield, September 16, 1808, and continued to teach there in the same district until his death, a period of twenty-five years. He was succeeded by his son Morris, who taught in the same district for seventeen years afterward. While he taught at Springfield, his residence was in the houses which he occupied successively as tenant, until May, 1819, when he moved into the new house he had erected for himself on the north side of the main Rockaway road (now Merrick road) and which he occupied until his death.

His acquaintance and business relations were extensive, reaching over a large territory, and often calling him to considerable distances from home. While yet at the height of his usefulness, on one occasion he encountered a violent, cold and driving snow storm, against which he was finally unable to contend, losing his way and becoming exhausted by his efforts. Although rescued within a few hours and conveyed to his home, the effects of the cold and shock of the exposure proved fatal, and he survived only ten days. He died on March 8, 1833, and was buried in Springfield Cemetery; his widow receiving expressions of sympathy from the whole community, throughout which both were held in esteem and respect.

He was tall, portly, strong, with black eyes and hair, genial in his manner, talented and witty, and rigidly honest in all his dealings; and is said by those who were under his tuition, to have been a good disciplinarian, of good attainments, and successful as a teacher. He was also a surveyor and conveyancer, and an excellent penman withal. Many of his legal papers, and some of his maps (which it may be noticed are among the most useful and important local maps of their time) still exist, and are remarkable for clearness, accuracy, and neatness of execution. His dexterity, notwithstanding the absence of his left hand, has often been remarked upon, enabling him, among other things, to cut and shape quill pens (then exclusively used) with complete facility and skill, and to use his surveying instruments with readiness and rapidity.

He held some few local positions and offices; was appointed, in 1808, one of a committee of three to transcribe the Town records of Hempstead that were then in North Hempstead;¹ in 1810 was elected an

Overseer of Highways (just one hundred and seventy years after Stephen Fosdick held the same office in Charlestown)¹; and was one of the first Justices of the Peace elected after the passage of the law in 1827, providing for the election of these officers by the people.² He was influential in politics, a minor incident of which was his success in defeating certain candidates for re-election as school inspectors, with whom he had had a difference upon school matters the year before.³

He was a member of the Masonic fraternity. The date of his admission and his rank are not positively known, because of the records of his Lodge having been burned in 1837, but his regalia is said to have been splendid in material and ornamentation, indicating some prominent position in the Order.

His wife was Jane Doughty, a Quakeress. They were married at Rockaway, August 30, 1794, by Rev. George Faitoute, Pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Jamaica. She was born May 10, 1765, and died at Springfield, April 27, 1837. She was daughter and third child of Jacob and Abigail Doughty, of Rockaway, and was no doubt a descendant of Elias Doughty, son of Rev. Francis Doughty, who came from Taunton to Long Island, in 1644, and of whom Thompson says: "It is believed that all families of that name in this part of the State are the descendants of this gentleman."⁴ The Doughty family were Quakers, and she was of the practical and serene temperament characteristic of her sect. She was an invaluable helpmeet to her husband, and devoted, intelligent, discreet, and capable in governing her family, Craft of that place, on June 15, 1826; both resided there till death; he was one of the old family of that name noted for longevity, frugality and thrift; was in early life a seaman, but later a farmer; she was exemplary in character and disposition, a cheerful and discreet counselor, devoted to her family, full of interest for the welfare of those with whom she was connected, and under affliction, and in the suffering of her closing days, exhibited the patience, serenity and fortitude of a noble character. She died, after a lingering illness, August 13, 1882; her husband on September 12, 1890; both buried at Rockaway; six chn.—1, CHARLES, b. October 31, 1827, m. Mary Jane Abrams, December 7, 1856, he and his brother Alfred were engaged in the coasting trade, and were both lost at sea, off Little Egg Harbor, in a terrific gale and snow storm, January 23, 1871. They were on the schooner, Alfred Hall, bound from Virginia to New York, with oysters. She struck the bar in trying to make the harbor. When she struck, the schooner, Mary C. Elliott, which had also struck, was very near, and her Captain had gone for assistance. In the afternoon he returned with the lifeboat of the station, whose crew rescued the crew of the Elliot (whose mate makes the statement), after which they came back to the bar with the lifeboat, to aid the crew of the Hall; but the Captain of the Hall, thinking he could save his vessel at high water, declined their offer of assistance, thanking the lifeboat crew for their kindness. The gale increased, and at night the Hall went down with all on board. Both he and his brother were industrious and intelligent, and excellent seamen, and the sad news caused deep regret in the community in which they lived. 9. MORRIS FOSDICK, (Hon.), youngest child of Morris Fosdick and Jane Doughty, b. at Springfield November 7, 1814; lived there until January, 1850, when he removed to Jamaica village, where he has since resided; teacher and surveyor by profession; in May, 1833, became the successor of his father in the Springfield school, taught there till December, 1849; appointed Commissioner of Deeds October 6, 1838; elected Justice of the Peace April, 1841, for four years from January 1, 1842, re-elected in 1845, and again in 1849 but did not qualify; appointed a Judge of Common Pleas of Queens County and commissioned by Governor Silas Wright, March 25, 1846; served until 1849; County Judge and Surrogate January 1, 1850 to January 1, 1858, when the offices were separated; Surrogate January 1, 1858 to December 31, 1865; member Board of Education 1857 to 1866; Trustee of Union Hall; Treasurer of Jamaica Savings Bank from its organization in 1866 to present time; proficient in the law, but repeatedly declining admission to the bar; since his retirement from public life, busily engaged in the management of estates and of the business affairs of a large clientage, and attends daily at his office where his two sons and a grandson are also engaged.

He was married to Catharine Jane Baylis of Springfield, October 26, 1836, at that place, by Rev. Elias W. Crane, pastor First Presbyterian Church, Jamaica. She was b. November 4, 1817, is dau. of John and Mary Baylis, and a lineal descendant of Elias Baylis (the line being 1 Elias, 2 Ephraim, 3 Ephraim, 4 John, and 5 Catharine J.) who was chairman of the Jamaica committee acting in concert with the Continental Congress during the Revolutionary War, and of whom the following notice appears in Onderdonk's Revolutionary Incidents, p. 107:

"The day after Woodhull's capture (August 29, 1776) Elias Baylis, chairman of the Jamaica committee, was walking over to Nathaniel Smith's, at the one mile Mill, to hear the news, when he was arrested by a neighbor, who wished to do something to ingratiate himself with the British. When the venerable man, blind as he was, was brought before the British officer at Jamaica, he exclaimed in surprise, 'Why do you bring this man here? He's blind; he can do no harm.' The unfeeling wretch who had informed against him, replied: 'He's blind, but he can talk.' Baylis did not attempt to conciliate the officer, but unfortunately dropped a few words in vindication of the American cause. This was enough. He was shut up in the Presbyterian Church that night, and next day carried to the prison at New Utrecht. He was subsequently removed to the Provost in New York. Daniel Duryee (afterwards Assemblyman), Wm. Furman, Wm. Creed, and two others, were put in one pew in New Utrecht church. Baylis wanted them to get the Bible out of the pulpit and read to him. They feared to do it, but led the blind man to the pulpit steps. As he returned with it, a British guard met him, beat him violently, and took away the book. They were three weeks at New Utrecht, and then marched down to the prison ship.

"Elias Baylis was an elder of the Presbyterian Church, and stood high in the community for uprightness and ability. He had a sweet voice, and could sing whole psalms and hymns from memory; it will not be surprising then to find him beguiling his dreary imprisonment in singing, among others, the 142d Psalm. * * *

"The aged man was visited in prison by his wife and daughter. After a confinement of about two months, at the intercession of his friends, he was released, barely in time to breathe his last without a prison's walls. He died in crossing the ferry with his daughter."

In connection with him it may be noted that in the same Church in which he was an elder, one of his descendants is an elder, another a deacon, and another a trustee, at the present time, two of them being included in this record.

Judge Fosdick and his wife are also members of the same Church, the Presbyterian in Jamaica Village, and live in that Village, where their surviving children and descendants also reside; six chn.—1, LEWIS L., b. Gen. V., Samuel Fosdick third, third ch. of Samuel second,
- 1710-1792.
Gen. VI., Thomas Fosdick, tenth ch. of Samuel third.

THOMAS FOSDICK, the tenth child of Samuel Fosdick, Jr., of Oyster Bay, was born in 1772, and was therefore about fourteen when he went with his father to Dutchess County. He probably remained there only a short time. He married, had one child, and died young. His wife's name is not known. His death occurred at his brother Nathaniel's, whose wife gave this account of it. On the occasion of some public meeting or celebration where a company of young men was assembled and tests of strength were being had, he attempted to raise a large anchor which not many could lift from the ground. He raised it to his knees, but as he did so was seized with hemorrhage. He was taken to his brother Nathaniel's and it was checked for a time, but in the night it was renewed, and he died soon after, about twelve hours after he was taken. This was before 1798. His wife died previously.

His child was named HANNAH. She was brought up in the family of a Quaker, named Foster, married William Harper, and lived in Ulster County about twenty-five years ago. Nothing further known.

SOLOMON FOSDICK AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

LINE OF ANCESTRY.

Gen. I., Stephen Fosdick, progenitor, 1583-1664.

Gen. II., John Fosdick, seventh ch. of Stephen, 1626-1716.

Gen. III., Samuel Fosdick first, fourth ch. of John, 1655-1700.

Gen. IV., Samuel Fosdick second, second ch. of Samuel first, 1684—after 1767.

Gen. V., Samuel Fosdick third, third ch. of Samuel second, 1710-1792.

Gen. VI., Solomon Fosdick twelfth ch. of Samuel third.

SOLOMON FOSDICK, the twelfth and youngest child of Samuel Fosdick third, was born April 8, 1776, at Oyster Bay; christened there by an Episcopal minister; lived there until after his mother's death, which occurred when he was ten years of age; accompanied his father when he removed to Dutchess County; learned the trade of a carpenter and joiner; was probably near and may have lived with his brother Samuel in New Baltimore when he married.

He married Anna Thorne April 8, 1798, at New Baltimore on Coeymans Patent, at the house of Abraham Potts. She was born at North Castle, Westchester County, March 2, 1777. She was granddaughter of Stevenson Thorne and Prudence Merritt, his wife, of Westchester Co. Her parents removed from there to Coeymans Patent in 1789. Her father died when she was sixteen. The family of her father and that of Samuel Fosdick of New Baltimore were intimate. She may have been related to Samuel's wife, who bore the same family name. Her family are understood to have been Quakers.

Soon after his marriage he lived at Newburgh, removed to Rockaway in 1803, remained there until the spring of 1808, when he went to Amsterdam, New York, after three years removed to Rensselaerville, in the fall of 1819 removed to Boston, Erie County, New York, where he remained the rest of his life.

He was very proud of his mother, with whom he was a pet and companion, his sister Debbie being his associate. He took pleasure, in his family, in talking over recollections of his childhood life in Oyster Bay and of his brothers and sisters. Owing to his own early orphanage he was always very sympathetic and kind toward orphan children. He availed himself of the opportunities afforded him by his various changes of residence of learning of the members of his father's family, and his interest in them was happily supplemented by the interest taken in such matters by his children, the daughter of one of whom says : "Grandmother and her older girls had a way of keeping some little thing and using it as a memento to illustrate stories of eastern relations. In winter nights, in their log cabin, my parents were often talking of eastern friends and relations." There are yet preserved among some of his descendants many of the gifts to his wife and daughters from his brothers and others. One instance is : About eighty-five years ago Morris gave to his sister-in-law, Solomon's wife, a beautiful necklace of beads which she wore until her death, more than fifty years ; they were then divided among her older daughters, one of whom wore her portion of them until her death, when her daughter came into possession of them, and, in 1880, gave some of them to the writer, a grandson of the original donor of the gift seventy-five years before.

He was young when his father took him to Dutchess County, had been tenderly reared, left there young, made his way in life himself, encountered the hardships and privations incident to self-support in a comparatively new country, and having been at one time a sailor, and at another a farmer, and again following his occupation as carpenter and joiner, finally removed his family to the West, the females, children, and goods being in a covered wagon, and he and his eldest son Samuel attending on foot, Samuel carrying the gun of his grandfather referred to on a previous page, after the tedious journey of three weeks, settling and becoming a pioneer in a new, unsettled country,* there, by industry and self-denial, to meet with sufficient success, and to rear a family inured to the discomforts of pioneer life and splendidly endowed with the independence, self-reliance, and sterling qualities of character which such a life educes and develops. A son writes: "My father came to Western New York in 1819, when it was the frontier, and we have all known what such a life was, but as a family we struggled against poverty and ignorance, until it is with some degree of pride that I review our record."

He died in Boston, Erie County, New York, February 11, 1838. His funeral sermon was from II Cor. 5:15. His wife died August 8, 1858. Monuments to both are erected in Boston.

His children were nine in number: 1, SAMUEL; 2, ANGELINE; 3, PRUDENCE; 4, MORRIS; 5, ALICE HERMION PELHAM; 6, ELIZABETH GURNEY; 7, MARY THORNE; 8, JOHN SPENCER, and 9, JESSE THORNE.

*In 1807 one log house was the only building on the site of the present City of Rochester.
